FOREWORD

This Directory like the two previous ones is the product of the labour and love of some of our valued and energetic colleagues, and I trust an indulgent public will overlook the defects and shortcomings of the publication in the hope that subsequent Directories will contain fuller and more accurate information. But the condition of improvement is co-operation. Friends who will help us with information, views or suggestions will earn our gratitude.

The true spirit of Swadeshi has come to stay. In its somewhat narrow and restricted sense it leads to the production and consumption of Swadeshi commodities. As time goes on the feeling will grow in strength that it is the duty of a true Indian to use and encourage home-made articles. India's honour demands, India's interest dictates it. Therefore the joy of stimulating this spirit by spreading correct information about Swadeshi goods and firms in some slight measure belongs to the compilers of this Directory and there is no joy greater than the joy of service.

India's needs are many and varied. There may be considerable difference of opinion in regard to many of them but happily there is perfect unanimity in regard to Swadeshi. Let therefore all Indians unite in the service of India through Swadeshi. What we need is active support; passive sympathy is of little avail.

P R E F A C E

I have much pleasure in placing before the public this third edition of our All-India Swadeshi Directory. It would have been published much earlier but due to some unavoidable circumstances over which we had no control this was delayed for such a long time. 'It was our intention to compile a Swadeshi Directory which should be comprehensive and really an All-India one. This meant a lot of expense and labour. But thanks to the enthusiasm of our co-workers the idea has been realised to a large extent. In order to test the genuineness of the firms whether they are Swadeshi or not, we issued questionnaire forms and also took the help of local Swadeshi Sanghs and Buy Indian Leagues. In cases of doubt we either requested some respectable person of the locality to enquire, or sent our own representative to find out whether the particular firm comes under our definition of the term Swadeshi. We have also consulted Government publications and such periodicals, journals, bulletins and directories published by the various Swadeshi Sanghs, Buy Indian Leagues and private concerns, which were conveniently available.

In spite of all this it is possible that there may be some mistakes. I would request the public to send us the necessary information and we will see that the same are not repeated in our next edition.

It was intended to publish in this Directory articles from some of the prominent persons of the country, on the various aspects of the Swadeshi movement. But thinking that a directory is perhaps not quite the proper place for such articles and that the publication of such articles would add to the cost of the Directory, we have at least for the present given up this idea.

As we are shortly going to publish another directory for Cottage Industries no special section has been allotted to it in the present edition. In the meantime persons desirous of obtaining any information in this connection are advised to refer to our Industrial

Lastly, I take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude to the workers of this League for the efficient and heavy work they have performed in connection with this Directory. Their ready and cheerful help and co-operation have made all the difference in the smooth despatch of business; especially, I must mention the name of Mr. J. K. Sharma who, besides going through the tedious job of proof-reading so carefully, had to bear the brunt of the work.

I would like to congratulate Mr. K. P. Dar, the talented manager of the Allahabad Law Journal Press, for the printing and decent get-up of this book. We are also indebted to him for personal interest he has always taken in the affairs of the Allahabad Swadeshi League.

MANUFACTURE OF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS IN INDIA

By DR. S. DUTT, M.A., P.R.S. (Cal.), D.SC., D.I.C., A.I.C., (Lond.)

The amount of manufactured chemical products that comes into India from outside in the form of acids, alkalies, dye stuffs, medicines, soaps, toilet goods, paints, varnishes, enamels, inks, polishes, photographic materials, rubber, vulcanite, celluloid, bakelite, ceramics, essential oils, synthetic perfumes, artificial silk, gums, preservative, etc., is really enormous. In fact the combined value of all these products would easily exceed ten figures in Indian currency. Out of these endless varieties of Chemical Products that get imported into India every year, very few indeed are manufactured in this country. It is a matter of sincere regret to every patriotic Indian that inspite of unlimited facility that his mother country affords him in the shape of raw materials, cheap labour, favourable climatic conditions, facility of transport, cheap fuel and in certain localities—electricity, yet the amount of progress that India has made in the manufacture of chemical products during the last half a century is so little that it can be hardly called progress at all. The reason is not probably far to seek. With abject poverty of the teeming millions of India and no effective programme for the economic uplift of the masses, it is no wonder that India should be lagging behind in the race for the capture of the chemical trade in her own land. The result is that the eternal drain is still continuing.

However, in recent years there has been a lull in the tide and probably the most mighty force that can be easily discerned by even the most unthinking person in this connection, is the Swadeshi movement in India. There must be a demand for Indian goods before they can be manufactured in India, and the demand can only be stimulated by a healthy growth of patriotic consciousness amongst the countless masses. From this point of view Mahatma Gandhi the greatest of living mortals, may be regarded as the saviour of this country from economic depredation.

Coming back to the question of the manufacture of Chemical products in India, it can be easily seen that this special branch of Industry requires skill and knowledge of particularly high order, and in a country like India where the average literacy is only about 8 per cent, it is not likely to make a great appeal to the masses. Besides this, in Chemical Industry, the facilities that are required for successful operation, necessitates its being situated in big centres of population, preferably near the sea. Besides this it also requires that for economic operation, the by-products of one Industry should be utilised as the starting materials of another. All these necessarily mean organization on a large scale.

Amongst the heavy Chemicals, Sulphuric acid and Caustic soda are the most important, and in our country, the lead in the manufacture of Sulphuric acid on a large scale was given early in the present century by the Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works of Calcutta. At present there are a number of Sulphuric acid plants working in Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Cawnpore, Jamshedpur and in several places, in the Punjab. The total amount of Sulphuric acid that they produce is fairly sufficient for India's needs in the present undeveloped condition of the Chemical Industry. With the help of Sulphuric acid manufactured in India, several firms are also producing a few other heavy Chemicals like Nitric and Hydrochloric acids, Alum, Magnesium Sulphate, Salt cake and so on, on a small scale. Some glass and porcelain are also being manufactured now from indigenous materials.

As regards the production of Caustic or Washing soda, the country is altogether in the back ground, having absolutely no concern in which these important commodities are being manufactured even in moderate quantities. This is to be regretted since the raw materials for both the products in the shape of common salt and cheap electricity are available in this country in several localities.

In the manufacture of soap, which is probably one of the most important chemical products of the age, India has taken great strides, particularly during the last decade, and excellent toilet and washing soaps are now being manufactured by several firms in Calcutta, Bombay, Cawnpore, Mysore, Madras etc., which from the point of view of quality and price compare very favourably with the finest products from outside. And that is what is to be expected. Possessing unlimited resources in the form of oils and fats—the most important raw materials for the production of soap—it is really a wonder why India was so long exporting them to foreign countries and buying soap from them instead. With the resources at her disposal, India should not only be able to meet her home demands for soap, but supply half the world with this commodity.

In the manufacture of paints, varnishes and enamels that is to say, industries which have also to depend on oil as their raw materials, India is regrettably in the back ground. India produces nearly two-third of the world's supply of linseed oil (the remaining one-third being supplied by the Argentine Republic), which is the most important raw material for the manufacture of these important articles of every day use, yet we find that practically the greater bulk of this is exported to foreign countries, to be converted into paints and varnishes and reimported into India. This is particularly regrettable in view of the fact that many of the coloured earths which are necessary for the paint industry are also available in this country in good quantity. I hope the industrial magnates of this country will not be blind to this promising field in future.

The manufacture of oil-cloths, turpaulins, rexines, linoleums etc., are also another side of the oil industry which has long been neglected in this country. Although I have recently seen some fairly good oil-cloths being manufactured in this country, particularly in Bengal, yet their quality and finish is decidedly inferior to some of the good foreign makes and it is quite obvious that unless they are improved quickly enough, it would be difficult to stand the outside competition. The manufacture of oil-cloth and allied products is an industry that cannot be satisfactorily carried on a small scale. It requires organisation of much greater magnitude than a cottage industry in order to produce a satisfactory product cheaply enough. I hope our manufacturers will bear this in mind.

In the manufacture of essential oils and perfumes, India is hopelessly in the back ground. With the exception of Sandalwood oil manufactured in Mysore, Eucalyptus oil in some Malabar districts, Lemongrass oil in Ceylon, Rose oil in Ghazipur districts there is no other commodity of the nature of essential oil which is manufactured in India. And this is to be highly regretted, since in ancient times India was the place from which perfumes were distributed to other countries in the world. With a warm tropical climate and humid atmosphere India produces countless host of flowers, shrubs and creepers of an intensely fragrant nature from which the essential oil can be recovered with profit. There is no firm in India which for example manufactures essential oil from such fragrant flowers as 'chameli,' 'bela,' 'husn-hina,' 'tube rose' etc., from such odorous material as khus, agar, babchi, kuth etc., from such sweet smelling substance as cloves, cardamoms, aniseed, lemon, orangepeel, ginger, caraway, thyme etc. Even real musk which is a purely Indian product of unrivalled perfume is not much utilised in India but is exported to foreign countries to be converted into tincture Musk which is an essential constituent of every good perfume.

In the manufacture of toilet goods there has been made a certain amount of progress in this country particularly in soaps about which mention has already been made. The only unfortunate thing about these products is that the vast majority of them, for example, face creams, hair oils, toilet soaps, pomades, brillentines, emoluments, hair lotions, scent's, tooth pastes, hair creams etc., require essential oils and perfumes as one of the inevitable constituents, and unfortunately, they are not yet being produced in India. Another thing in the manufacture of toilet products is that most of these things in order to be saleable require to be highly finished with an attractive appearance, and for achieving these results, manufacturers often make free use of many foreign articles, such as fancy containers, coloured wrappers, ribbons, celophan, tissues, multicoloured printed labels etc., which necessarily increase the price of the finished product. In the course of my examination of hundreds of toilet products, I have come across innumerable instances, where every ingredient of a finished product was of foreign manufacture. In a limited number of cases, I have had reason to suspect that the product was not manufactured in India at all, but was simply imported from outside in the finished state and sold as Swadeshi. Such unscrupulous exploitation of the patriotic feeling though seems strange, yet is not very rare in this country.

Amongst the minor articles of everyday use, probably four are the most important, namely toothpowder or paste, ink, boot polish, and hair oil. It is really a pity that these products although being very widely manufactured in this country, yet are far from being perfect. The majority of toothpowders represent unbalanced and often unpalatable mixtures, with foreign chalk, magnesia or soapstone as the main ingredients, whereas many of the tooth pastes are awful concoctions which either dry up completely during the summer or lose their homogeneity in a short time. They are either too soapy or too gritty, too sweet or too pungent. As regards the inks, the vast majority of the blue-blacks deposit sediments and clog fountain pens, corrode nibs, eat away papers in the long run and gets bleached by light too soon. The coloured inks being mere solutions of aniline colours, get practically completely washed off by water. Regarding the boot polishes, it may be safely said that the majority of them do not polish the boot at all, but merely invite dust and dirt and harden the leather. This is not to be wondered at, since on examination of a large number of boot polishes, I have found that in most of them, the main ingredient is paraffin wax, which being a soft and unabsorbable material, remains on the surface of the leather and soils it in course of time. Lastly with regard to hair oils, I have found that many manufacturers do not care to purify the oils at all, but simply mask the impurities by the addition of bright colours and strong perfumes. Some of them go even further and add paraffin oil or lard-oil in order to evolve a sparkling product at a minimum cost and labour. Some times I have come across hair oils which contain only paraffin oil and nothing else, yet they are always advertised as pure vegetable oils.

In the manufacture of preservatives, India is still lagging behind. In Europe and America untold quantities of jams, jellies and preserved fruits are manufactured every year, but in India there are only a few firms which manufacture preservatives of this kind. The only fruit jelly which is being manufactured in any quantity is the Guava jelly, and in this respect Allahabad is particularly famous. In Calcutta, there are one or two farms manufacturing preserved fruits and in the Punjab there is another, manufacturing sugar coated fruits and seeds. With the exception of these microscopic few, there is hardly any farm in India working on this profitable line, particularly as Indian fruits are some of the best in the world. In the manufacture of preserved milk, milk powder, malted milk or other patent milk foods there is no representation at all. Only a few years ago the manufacture of lozenges, caramels, chocolates, fruit drops, natural and synthetic fruit syrups etc., was practically an unknown industry in this country, but now there are a good many farms specialising in this line. That is at least a good sign.

In the manufacture of gums, adhesive pastes, resins and plastic materials I find there is hardly any good representation at all. There is a single firm in Bengal making articles of celluloid, one in Calcutta and two in Kashmir working with papier-mache, two firms in U. P. producing resin and about half a dozen working with laquer. There is no firm in India working with vulcanite, bakelite or xyconite and there is no satisfactory adhesive paste of Indian manufacture although high quality gums and resins are abundantly found in India.

In the manufacture of artificial silk, mercerised cotton and mercerised jute fibre, there is absolutely no representation on the Indian side although India is a large consumer of these lustrous chemical yarns, and gets most of these commodities imported from Italy, Japan, Germany and England. The manufacture of artificial silk particularly viscose and celenese is a very profitable industry and practically every country in Europe and America as also China and Japan are producing them in large quantities. I do not see any reason why they should not be produced in India also.

In the manufacture of drugs and medical products, there has been a fair amount of progress particularly in the domain of tinctures and liquid extracts of the active principles of Indian medicinal plants. In this respect pioneer work has been done by the famous Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works of Calcutta. There are many other firms now in the field and the old Ayurvedic System of Indian medicine is now being given a new charm in the light of modern curative science. India is a land of medicinal plants of rare virtue and the exploitation of them on modern lines is to be highly desired, since that is calculated to bring health and happiness in place of disease and pestilence to which the multitudinous millions of India are subject.

In the manufacture of other kinds of medicinal products, for example, Injection media, Sera, Antipyretics, Analgesics, Purgatives and Laxatives, Antiseptics, Disinfectants, Salines ,Vitaminous products etc., there is also a certain amount or representation from Indian firms, but their activity in this field is hopelessly inadequate to meet the colossal demand for such materials. This is a good field, and with honest work, imagination and research, this is likely to give good return in future.

Amongst the miscellaneous chemical industries, the manufacture of pencils, crayons, coloured chalks, carbon papers, printing ink, typewriter ribbons, pigments, cement, glass, porcelain, burnt enamel, and matches are being done on a moderate scale in several places in India. But some of the more difficult ones as photographic materials, dye-stuffs, synthetic fuels and solvents, vulcanised rubber goods, synthetic chemicals and medicines, tanning materials etc., have not found any place in India chemical industry. Probably it may take a long time before they do so.

In conclusion I may say that the manufacture of chemical products in India if not already in the infancy, has not passed the adolescent stage, and brain and capital in India are needed to exert their utmost in order to exploit this important source of national wealth.

"Coconut Oil"—Delicately perfumed, strengthens the root, helps the growth and gives an admirable beauty to the hair.

"Pomade De Rose"—For preserving beauty and complexion giving life to the dull skin.

"Amla Hair Oil"—Delightly perfumed gives a most agreeable fragrance. Stops all itching of the scalp, will make hair grow lustrous, glossy and silky. Gives light to the eye and nourishes the brain.

"Fruit Drops"—Are manufactured under most hygenical conditions, by up-to-date machineries and on scientific lines. In ordinary course of time and hottest climate our drops do not loose their brittleness, freedom and lustre. They are made of brilliant colours and varied designs and delicately flavoured. Our drops surpass all other makes in taste.

"Vinegar"—The only best preparation in the market for daily use.

MILLS

We regret we are not able to publish the list of genuine Swadeshi Mills as the matter is under investigation. The list published in our last edition can not be reproduced as most of the Mills certified have broken their pledges. As soon as a fresh list is compiled the League would publish the same at the end of this directory as a supplement.

More than just a Trademark

Today in every town and village the Ticonderoga diamond is becoming increasingly familiar. This is indicative of the increasing recognition of the thousands of users of Ticonderoga products. They know that behind the symbol stands a large organization and enterprise devoted to the production of factory-made goods of standard and best of materials.

THE REAL PURCH

Every time you buy a Ticonderoga product, you are purchasing the goods available in two other big businesses. The Ticonderoga Corporation, which makes

THE TICONDEROGA

Match Company, also makes

PERFUMED TOBACCO

and other goods.

Be Wise

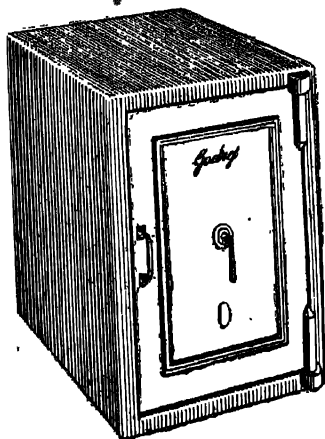

Before you lose

Run No Risks

Buy a Real Safe

GODREJ

Penny-wise people try to save a few rupees by buying a poorly made safe, but lose all that was so hard to earn and so painful to save. The loss may teach them wisdom but could not bring back the lost fortune.

Do not gamble upon safety

Godrej Safes give your valuables best protection. They have defeated the craftiest Safe burglars and defied the worst fires. All Departments of the Govt. of India including Posts and Telegraphs, Railways and Govt. Treasuries etc., Indian States, biggest Banks, and business firms and private homes—all use Godrej Safes.

Godrej patent methods of Safe construction like the 16-corner-bend construction, our latest machinery and arrangements for large-scale production enable us to make high quality Safes at low prices.

= SWEETS =

BUT WHAT A DIFFERENCE !

Our Sweets are the highest grades that it is possible to manufacture. Get them from your local dealer and judge for yourself.

Many tempting varieties, plain, satin finish, striped, decorated.

Do not confuse our sweets with the other cheap sweets in the market. Our standard of quality is very very high. Rigorous selection of raw materials, the aid of modern power driven machinery, supervision of scientific expert and many other factors are responsible for this high standard.
